

Project 3: Design & Specification

Executive Summary

Anybody can order from bricklink.com. The design of the new bricklink.com website shopping cart will bring together all the features of the ordering process into one cohesive unit. From start to finish, the path a customer takes from finding a seller to making a payment will be clear.

Design: Breadth-First

	This design has all the checkout options on one page. There are three divided sections for order info, shipping info, and Payment info. Payment info opens in a new screen where you enter either PayPal information or a credit card. You click on the Pay Now button and you're done!
	Criteria	Weight	Score	Comment
	Speed	30%	2	Everything on one page is very convenient and quick. Users can see everything at once.
	Complete	30%	-2	There's some very important information missing such as where the items are shipping from and how the shipping is being accounted for.
	Authentic	30%	0	With the PayPal Logo and correct credit card security, the users will be certain they placed an order. An email confirmation will be assured when a notice is placed that an address is required.
	Regular	10%	1	Most checkouts have multiple pages, so this might be unfamiliar to a customer. However, the questions and information required will be familiar.

	Complete	30%	-1	There is more information this time, but there is still missing some important options, such as the seller's location. It would also be helpful to have the shipping address be confirmed before shipping costs are calculated.
	Authentic	30%	0	With the PayPal Logo and correct credit card security, the users will be certain they placed an order. An email confirmation will be assured when a notice is placed that an address is required.

Criteria	Weight	Score	Comment
Speed	30%	1.5	With only two pages, we got a great head start. It may not be as succinct as a one-page layout, but it's much better than the original.
Complete	30%	1.5	The options are there so that's great!
Authentic	30%	0	Still the same here. What could make it better and more trustworthy? Maybe a notice about receiving an email confirmation or a thank you page after the order has been completed.
Regular	10%	-1	There might be some confusion here with the shipping options. I've seen some websites that ask for an address to confirm costs, but I wonder if a log-in requirement would eliminate the need to go through this or if that would scare some people away.
Score:	0.8

Design: Depth-First

Two Pages with Shipping options   Refined 1
Criteria	Weight	Score
Speed	30%	1.5	I think the two pages will be pretty standard at this point. Putting everyone on one page sounds nice, but isn't practical when trying to include all the required information.
Complete	30%	1.5	To exclude some sellers from the results, the user could add that to their account settings. That eliminates the need to create that option for every order. Only the options specific to that order will be included.
Authentic	30%	0	Just normal. I need to add notices or a confirmation page.
Regular	10%	1	Pretty normal. I like the shipping costs included with each's seller's information. That groups things in a way that is clear and normal for a customer.
Score:			1

Two Pages with Shipping options   Refined 2
Criteria	Weight	Score
Speed	30%	1.5	This is going well. I like the two pages. I feel like it's a fairly quick process, especially if the shipping address and customer information is already filled in because they are logged in. I think some wayfinding at the top of the pages would clarify how many steps are needed to finish an order.
Complete	30%	-1	There's a little bit of confusion here still. The "item condition" only lets the customer choose for all the items combined. It would be better to choose for each individual item. That should be included when the item is first chosen and then displayed on the "Review Your Order" list on the first page with the option to change. I forgot to add in the shipping for each seller.

Authentic	30%	0	I forgot to add a notice about email confirmation. I wonder about the clarity of the red buttons.
Regular	10%	1	This is slightly different from a regular checkout because it contains options that are different than some. But it still scores well because the usual requirements are there.
Score:	0.25

  	<h3>Two Pages + Confirmation   Final</h3> This version compiles all the needed elements of the checkout process. There is a third screen but this is only a confirmation of an order that has been placed.
Criteria	Weight	Score
Speed	30%	1.5	Only two pages to fill out. The address should autofill from the required log-in when placing an order. But you can still edit that address within the field.
Complete	30%	2	Checklist: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Item list with the condition for each line item</li> <li>Shipping address confirmation</li> <li>Options for Seller location and rating</li> <li>Itemized list with each seller/shipping separate</li> <li>Simplified payment options</li> </ul>
Authentic	30%	1.5	A confirmation page with order details Includes required email field
Regular	10%	1	Most items are what is expected when placing an online order. Wayfinding at the top helps with understanding the process.
Score:	1.6

The next thing that Josh does is verify his shipping and contact information. This section of the first page has his shipping address already filled in from his account. But he could change the ship-to address if he wanted to. At this point, a valid email address is required so that order confirmation and shipping information can be sent to him.

An error message will appear if Josh tried to continue with his order and there's something wrong with the information on build screen, such as an invalid shipping address, email address or if the items in his cart are not available.

5. Enter Your Payment

This is the last piece of Josh's order. Here he needs to choose how he will pay, either with a credit card or with PayPal. He chooses PayPal because he doesn't want to enter all his credit card information right now. When he clicks on PayPal he's taken to the log-in screen where he verifies his payment. After that he is taken back to this screen. Josh can now, click on the "Place Your Order" button. The confirmation screen then opens.

Executive Summary

Anybody can order from bricklink.com. The design of the new bricklink.com website shopping cart will bring together all the features of the ordering process into one cohesive unit. From start to finish, the path a customer takes from finding a seller to making a payment will be clear.

Criteria

Name	Criteria	Priority
Speed	The order process should not take too long for anyone.	Priority 1: Speed is an important consideration. If it takes too long then the customer may not place an order and that would be considered a failure.
Complete	The order process should include all the necessary information.	Priority 1: If the customer is unsure about the order or its pricing and shipping then they will probably not place an order and this would be a failure.
Regular	The order process should be familiar with other checkout processes.	Priority 2: It would certainly be useful for the order process to be like other checkouts the customer has encountered. It is not a prerequisite for success. A user could still figure out an unfamiliar layout.
Authentic	The order process must appear to be reputable.	Priority 1: If there is any part of the ordering process that does not give the correct feedback or look authentic then this would cause failure.
Look	The page should be fun to look at, like LEGO.	Priority 3: It would be nice if everything was fun and exciting but this would not affect if the user actually bought something. It isn't something I will go out of my way to achieve.

Persona

Josh is a 40-year old professional and father. He loves to build with LEGO and share them with his children as a hobby. He is busy but interested in spending time being creative with his family.

Scenario

Josh comes home from work to spend time with his family. He and his 12-year-old son want to build a Batman LEGO set. Josh goes to Bricklink.com to find the required parts and places an order. He goes through selecting the parts, confirming his order, his contact information and payment.
